Use State's Tractors to Plow Fields

Richland Farmers to Be Given Aid; Plan Day and Night Plowing.

Richland county farmers and others throughout the state whose spring planting is far behind schedule because of bad weather and the labor shortage today were offered the help of state highway department tractors and operators in a day and night plowing and planting program.

The move, believed the first offer of its kind in the middle west, is being made to help save the state's threatened food program, said Hal G Sours, state highway director.

Richland county was among 34 in northern Ohio which requested the use of state equipment. County Agent George B. Ganyard, head of the Richland farm labor committee, told the highway department county farmers could use six tractors during the planting season.

Only one-third of the county's corn acreage had been planted three days ago and although favorable weather since then has helped to speed the planting, less than half the acreage had been planted today, Ganyard said.

Use of the state tractors will be governed by the farm labor

MANSFIELDER DIES IN ACTION

Joseph Petres Killed While In Aleutian Area, Father Told By War Department.

The death of the first Mansfield soldier in the Aleutian area, presumably in the conquest of Attu, was reported today by the war department.

A telegram to Joseph Petres, 722 Bowman street said that his son, Joseph Petres, jr 28, was killed May 24 in the North American area.

Jos. Petres, Jr.

Word of the death came on the heels of an announcement made by the navy that 342 Americans had given their lives in the fight to rout the Japanese from the island bastion.

Ironically the telegram was delivered to the elder Petres as he was reading a letter from his son, dated April 29, and passed by army censors, in which the soldier said he could not reveal his

NICE DAY, EH?

Mercury Soars to High of 88 Then Drops to 69.

Mansfield cooled off in ideal June weather today after a late spring heat wave which sent the mercury to a season's high of 88 degrees yesterday.

Although the weatherman forecast showers and scattered thunderstorms for this afternoon and tonight, there wasn't any evidence of rain at noon today. The temperature then stood at 69 degrees.

The mercury drop ended a week of sweltering weather during which high humidity combined with summer temperatures to make Mansfielders mop their brows and bring their electric fans out of storage.

Yesterday's average reading of 75.5 degrees was nine above normal. The day's low was 63.

Revolt Puts Argentina In Allied Camp

The successful revolution staged yesterday in Buenos Aires by a military junta has placed Argentina in the camp of the United Nations by ousting 'neutral' president Ramon Castillo, shown right center, who fled the capital on the gunboat Drummond. Troops like those shown at top staged the revolution which was led by Gen. Pedro Ramirez, left center. Ramirez immediately proclaimed collaboration with the United Nations. The Drummond is shown in the lower photo.

CASTILLO IN FLIGHT

Ousting of Last 'Neutral' Government In Hemisphere Costs 32 Lives.

BULLETIN

LA PLATA, Argentine—(U.P.)—Ramon S. Castillo, ousted president of Argentina, landed at the La Plata naval base today and surrendered to General Masson, commander of the Second army division.

(By United Press)

BUENOS AIRES — A military junta today controlled all Argentina, including the army and the navy, after a one-day revolution that cost only 32 lives and gave promise of cutting the last Axis tie to the Western Hemisphere.

Martial law was proclaimed throughout the country last night, but this appeared little more than a formality since the minor resistance encountered in the initial stages of the revolt had been put down quickly and calm prevailed everywhere.

Ramon S. Castillo, the isolationist president who fled the capital before troops revolting against his regime reached the presidential palace, had vanished aboard the 450-ton Argentine minesweeper Drummond with five of his ministers after briefly putting into Uruguayan waters for supplies.

With Castillo disappeared, apparently, whatever hop he had of organizing a counter-revolution, at least in the immediate future.

(An unconfirmed report reached Montevideo that Castillo had sent a message to the United States government reminding it that the Pan American convention at Havana decreed that other American nations should come to the aid of any of their number attacked. Washington sources disclaimed knowledge of any such message.)

Castillo made one desperate attempt to rally his supporters early last night when he sent a message to the Argentine supreme court announcing that he had transferred the seat of his government to the river squadron and raised his flag as commander in chief. He promised that the rebellion would be "punished." Only a few hours later, however, he steamed out of Argentine waters.

Some of the generals and admirals who joined in the revolu-

GET RULES

12,000 Homes to Be Provided With Raid Instructions.

Acting on the suggestion of city air raid wardens, the Mansfield civilian defense council last night authorized the printing of 12,000 air raid instruction cards to place in the city's homes for reference.

The cards, which will be distributed to every home by air raid wardens, will tell what each blast of the air raid sirens means and give instructions about preparing for air raids. Holes at the top of the cards will make it convenient to hang them on nails or attach cords to them so they won't be lost easily.

The council voted to merge Madison township with the city OCD district and authorized Mayor W. J. Locke, chairman of the committee, to ask the state headquarters for permission to effect the merger.

Churchill Back In London to Report Talks

Meeting Seen as Prelude to Smashing Blows by Allies; Prime Minister Flies Home by Way of Africa, Maps Final Strategy Changes.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—A special meeting of the British cabinet was called today by Prime Minister Winston Churchill shortly after his return to London from conferences in Washington and North Africa.

The meeting was called as unofficial sources forecast an early end to the lull in Allied military operations in the European theater.

The prime minister summoned his cabinet to hear a report on conversations he had with President Roosevelt in Washington while military chiefs of the two major Allied nations drew up plans for future operations against Germany, Italy and Japan.

There were indications that Churchill had been authorized during his stop-over in North Africa to make last-minute decisions on Allied strategy.

He was expected to arrive at No 10 Downing street, his official residence, by limousine but surprised waiters by strolling up to the door nonchalantly afoot.

Churchill waved and gave the famous "V" sign to a gathering of American soldiers who cheered him lustily.

The prime minister returned to England by air from North Africa, motoring to London from the airfield where his fighter-escorted plane landed him back on British soil.

The prime minister, an official announcement from No. 10 Downing street said, left the United States a week ago and from there flew to Gibraltar and thence to North Africa.

His trip to North Africa included a visit to the headquarters of American Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander-in-chief, where he was joined by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

The British officials were still in North Africa when the new government to rule the French empire was formally established by Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, French civil and military commander in North Africa, and Gen. Charles De Gaulle, Fighting French leader who formerly had headquarters in London.

Churchill and Eden met the seven-man French committee of national liberation at a luncheon tendered yesterday by Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, naval commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean.

"The proceedings were most cordial," Downing street said.

Churchill and the foreign secretary also visited liberated Tunis, capital of the French protectorate of Tunisia, and reviewed American and British armies in northwest Africa.

The announcement of the prime minister's return said that, besides Eden, he was accompanied by the chief of the British imperial general staff, Sir Alan Brooke, who went to Washington with Churchill along with other military leaders.

The combined chiefs of staff of the United States and Britain conferred in Washington while the prime minister talked with President Roosevelt. Before Churchill departed from the American capital the military leaders, prominent among whom were the chiefs charged with prosecuting the war against Japan, submitted detailed plans of operations which they had drawn up.

The conference was concluded with "complete agreement on future operations in all theaters of war," President Roosevelt said in a statement on May 27. The meetings were begun in Washington on May 11 and among those attending the staff conferences were British Field Marshal Archibald Wavell, commander-in-chief in India, and American Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, commander of the United States forces in the China-India-Burma theater.

Since then Gen. Stilwell has

SERIOUS: Tojo Sees Danger As U. S. Plans Huge Air Drive

(By Associated Press)

Japan's Premier Hideki Tojo acknowledged today that "the Greater East Asia war is more and more in a state of decisive battles and the war situation is becoming increasingly serious," even as Washington sources forecast a gigantic Allied air offensive against the Japanese.

A Tokyo broadcast said Tojo issued a special statement, warning the Japanese people of grave events in the making, shortly before the funeral of Fleet Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, author of the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

Yamamoto's ashes were buried amid lavish pomp at a cemetery near Tokyo, alongside those of Admiral Togo, hero of the Russo-Japanese war.

In Washington, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Artemus Gates hinted the Allies were reaching out for new air bases in the Pacific, declaring:

"The trend of war for the immediate present seems to be a battle for air bases."

In the southwest Pacific, Gen Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced U. S. Flying Fortresses and Liberators, blasting at Japanese airdromes in New Guinea for the seventh successive day, dropped 18 tons of bombs on the enemy at Wewak yesterday.

Not a single Japanese plane has challenged the week-long series of raids, dispatches said, and once again all the American aircraft returned safely to their base.

On the Burma front, where land fighting has been bogged by monsoon rains, RAF warplanes bombed targets in the big Japanese base

SMOTHERED: Italian Airbase Blasted In New Shuttle Raids

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—Nearly 125 tons of bombs dropped from U. S. Liberators of the Middle East air force smothered Grottalgie airdrome near Brindisi, in southeastern Italy, in a two-wave assault yesterday while air forces from northwest Africa shuttled over Pantelleria, Sicily and Italy in their daily blows at Premier Mussolini's anti-invasion strongholds.

Lieut. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz's forces struck at Catanzaro, on the sole of the Italian boot 90 miles from the Messina strait and the most easterly point of Italy yet attacked from northwest Africa.

Both Catanzaro and Syracuse were attacked by incendiary-laden Wellingtons Thursday night.

Cairo dispatches said hangars and administration buildings at the large Grottalgie airdrome were covered with direct hits in the daylight raid. Large fires were left burning and columns of smoke and explosions marked the mushrooming destruction. One entire section of the field was said to have been knocked out.

All the raiders returned safely, a United States communique said, although they were attacked by a formation of enemy fighters, four of which were shot down.

In Cairo, Col. Keith K. Compton of St. Joseph, Mo., who led the Winning Peace Job of Grads, Commencement Speaker Says

By WALLY DAVIS

The job of avoiding mistakes made in the last World war and winning the peace in this one is a task for the youth of today, members of the Senior high school graduating class were told at commencement exercises last night.

This message was left with the 286 graduates by Don Bolt of Marion, Ind., newspaperman and radio commentator, speaking on the subject, "The Road Ahead."

With weather conditions ideal for outdoor exercises, more than 2,000 gathered at the west side of Stadium Field to witness the march of graduates into the stadium and take their places before the speaker's stand for the program which ended their high school careers.

"You must expect to play a leading role in the establishment of a better post-war world," Bolt told the graduates.

"After the last war we sat back and relaxed. We didn't face the issues. France thought up her Maginot line, sat back, ate, drank and was merry.

"Today France is a crumbled nation, stripped of her power and tradition. The rest of us are fighting this war because we did not finish the last one.

"It is your job, members of this graduating class, to see that we do not make these same mistakes. We must face the issues clearly. It is your job, the job of American youth, to win the peace."

Bolt outlined our relationship

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

LONDON—(By Wireless)—Back in London after five weeks in Sweden, I have the sensation of being a prisoner released from Shangri La.

The Swedes showered me and five other American newspapermen of our party with hospitality and with genuine indications of sympathy for the Allied side. But we were penned on the other side of the wall for Sweden is inside the German blockade, and we had some delay getting back to England.

Clapper

The shooting down by the Germans of the British plane bringing Leslie Howard and others to London from Lisbon suggests that possibly the Swedes were not being overcautious when they would not allow our plane to make the jump over the North sea to the British Isles until after many days' delay while waiting for safer weather. When they insist on safe weather they don't mean good weather, in the usual flying sense, but heavy clouds or a thick overcast. The Swedes try to jump the Nazi blockade wall only when the clouds are thick enough to hide their plane from German patrols. The nights are growing lighter daily, and if we had not escaped this week we might have been marooned for a couple of months until more darkness was available.

We were quite some thousands of feet up when the pilot suddenly ran out of his cloud cover into the clear, and we could see German-controlled territory below. He had to make a dive down to within a few hundred feet of the ground to get inside the only remaining clouds. A year ago the wife of the Swedish minister to London was grazed by a Nazi machine-gun bullet which barely missed the gas tank of the plane she was in—which accounts for the strict caution that has been observed since.

We were flown by Capt. Karl Lindner, one of the first five men to fly blind with instruments. He is on his way to America to make a survey for the North Atlantic Air Line which the Swedes hope to establish through a mission that is now in America.

The Swedes are excellent pilots. Their government-controlled air line runs a plane service to Germany, one ship each way daily. Now they want to open up a line connecting New York, the British Isles, Sweden and Moscow.

They believe also that after the war they could assist the Allies in commercial air traffic on the continent, and be able to operate more smoothly than an Allied service during the first period of intense hangover of war feelings. They hope to work on terms of reciprocity with Pan-American and other Allied lines, sharing facilities.

They are working on the assumption that Sweden would be a natural point of an American air line to Moscow, and that Sweden therefore has something to offer in return for the assistance hoped for from America. The principal Swedish banks, industries and shipping lines are financing a new Swedish company to handle the deal. The Swedes offer some inducements in answer to the question why America should turn over multi-motored transports to her now when they are needed so urgently for Allied war uses.

The fact that the Swedes are turning their backs on the Germans in favor of dealing with the Allies in this aviation matter is a clear indication of where they think their postwar bread can best be buttered. Incidentally, you only need to be back in England 24 hours to realize how well the Swedish bread is buttered now, literally speaking, even though Sweden is isolated behind the German blockade.

LIQUOR SALES ORDERLY UNDER RATIONING PLAN

State Announces Rules For Persons Who Missed Getting Cards.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Liquor purchases under the new state rationing system which went into effect June 1, have been moderate and orderly, although 1,500,000 Ohioans were eligible to buy package liquor at retail, State Liquor Director Don A. Fisher said today.

During this period sales were made chiefly to persons who completed their rationing registration and received their ration cards by Saturday, May 29.

Applicants who are incapacitated or who do not have war ration book No. 2, but who have returned their applications with a required supplemental form, also were eligible to purchase package liquor during the initial ration period.

Incapacitated persons, those aged or otherwise infirm and unable to appear in person for their application forms and books, may do so through an agent.

The agent must be able to prove the zone residence of the person he represents in order to obtain the application blank and agent form. He then must fill them out, get the incapacitated person's signature where required and return the blanks by mail. After allowing a few days for mailing, the agent may call for the ration card of the person he represents and obtain the book after presenting the war ration book No. 2 of the represented party.

Another special form is available at all liquor stores for persons who are non-holders of war ration book two, Director Fisher said.

Liquor store managers have been notified not to issue ration cards to any member of the military in uniform, the director added. Stores designated to serve the military will issue special forms of ration cards. These are to be made available soon for soldiers home on furlough.

Persons who have not yet filed applications or who have filed and not picked up their books, may do so on or after June 7, and after waiting a few days (applications must be mailed in) they can call for their card. Immediately upon receipt of the ration card purchases may be made.

Fisher announced that persons requiring more liquor than is allotted under rationing for medicinal purposes, may obtain a prescription from a doctor for this purpose. The prescription must be mailed to the liquor control headquarters in Columbus for approval.

WOODEN GUNS NOW THE STYLE IN HOLLYWOOD

That Makes It Tough to Be A Villainess, Says Lynn Bari.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—Most of Hollywood's most lethal weapons have gone to war, and the big, bad "gunmen" and the "gun girls" are reduced to carrying wooden pistols.

"That makes it tough to be a villainess, unless you stick to the little pearl-handled numbers."

The speaker was lovely, young Lynn Bari, who qualified as an authority on the subject of movie "murder." In the course of her varied career as an actress she's "murdered" some 10 men for the benefit of the movie cameras.

"You'd be surprised how many of the pistols you see in the movies—all except closeups—are wooden," Miss Bari added. "But most of the modern, up-to-date guns have gone to war."

Miss Bari, who has done a pretty good job of "shooting" to fame, declares she really "hates guns."

"My father used to manufacture and sell them," she said, "and I hated them. Then in one picture, I was scheduled to shoot Indians. I pulled the trigger and the rebound knocked me half way across the room. Another time I had to work a machine gun and it frightened me half to death."

At least one of her shooting episodes was effective.

"I was using blanks, but one blank hit the man I was "murdering" and did a good job of marking him up," she explained. "Blanks can be dangerous."

Miss Bari who really prefers light comedies, varies the "heavy" formulae in her latest picture. She doesn't shoot anybody, but she's a Japanese spy. "But I do get cleared up at the end of the picture," she explained.

Miss Bari, now vacationing in New York, does not look anything like the average conception of a menace. She was, in fact, the stepdaughter of a minister, and was born in Roanoke, Va.

She broke into the movies in her early 'teens by answering a newspaper ad. She'd been attending a dramatic school in Los Angeles where she lived with her family, to overcome an attack of adolescent awkwardness.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

SAN FRANCISCO—Australian labor has been strongly organized for many years and the unions run the country now by telephoned orders to Prime Minister Curtin but our people have only a vague notion of the power of the Australian unioncer. That the longshoremen of a country so close under the guns of the Jap, which is crying to Americans to help stand off the conquest, would refuse to unload American military cargo because of rain or quibble over jurisdictional union questions is almost incredible but true, nevertheless.

Pegler

For proof of this let us not take the word of any enemy of labor, pro-Nazi or appeaser. Let us, instead, refer to two American union publications, the Voice, the official organ of the marine cooks and stewards, and the Pilot, which expresses the personality and pro-communist politics of Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union.

Both belong to the CIO.

It would be well for more Americans to read more of the union papers. They are, to be sure, abusive, often illiterate, always untruthful and in many cases, rackets, but they do convey, unwillingly, information which cannot be found elsewhere.

In the Voice of last Dec. 9, one comes upon a small item published with great satisfaction by the cooks and stewards because it compliments the union crew of an American vessel and particularly the chief steward, for helping in the discharge of cargo. It consists of a letter from an American major in Australia to the captain of an American merchant ship and says:

"I desire to express my deep appreciation of the very excellent co-operation of yourself, your officers and crew in connection with the employment of military personnel in discharging your vessel, in order to avoid the otherwise dangerous delay which would have been occasioned by the refusal of civilian longshoremen to work during the recent heavy rains. This assistance rendered by Chief Steward Deering in arranging to feed a large number of soldiers on short notice and that of the bos'n in acting as winch-driver, is particularly commendable. It is teamwork like this that will help our country to win the war. Yours very truly, H. R. Hernung, major, Aus. Ats."

But could it be that a lot of husky Australian longshoremen, those rough and hardy giants, those swaggering knights of labor with an upper-case L, who boast of their physical endurance would refuse to handle a military shipment because of a rainfall that American kids were able to endure?

That's what the item says, and in a CIO publication. "In order to avoid the otherwise dangerous delay which would have been occasioned by the refusal of civilian longshoremen to work during the recent heavy rains." That might mean that they refused to work for a considerable time during the rainy season but we know they did this time anyway and that a "dangerous delay" might have resulted. The delay might have cost Australian and American lives. It might have cost the lives of Australian women and children.

That is not merely possible, but so. For verification of that let us consult a letter from T. Healy, secretary of the Australian Watershed Workers federation, published in the Pilot. Mr. Healy says labor conditions in Australia do not "materially" prolong the turn-around of vessels and blames inefficient loading, faulty planning and the lack of heavy gear on the piers and quays, for which latter he scolds the employers. However, where heavy gear does not exist there was no prewar need for it in an undeveloped and sparsely settled country. And even if it had been installed the Australian longshoremen might have refused to use it efficiently or at all, considering the fact that in San Francisco their countryman, Harry Bridges, still prevents the full use of much highly efficient machinery and many short cuts because they eat up the work too fast.

Mr. Healy says:

"The only time lost which can be attributed to the wharf workers is that lost for smoke-ohs or breaks because of rain. It is not the practice to work during the heavy rain unless covers and protection are provided. Employers have hesitated to do this in the past because of the cost involved."

Smoke-ohs apparently are smoking periods and Mr. Healy says the day workers take a half hour and the night workers a full hour for this purpose and thinks this improves efficiency.

"Attempts have been made by American people here to use American soldiers and, in two cases, we agreed to a number of soldiers receiving training on the wharf prior to their proceeding to the battle area."

We might read that again, too. The Australian Dockers' Union kindly lets American soldiers practice on their docks so that they could handle cargo in the fighting zone where the union longshoremen won't be going. But Mr. Healy says it has been necessary "to take a firm stand against the employment of soldier labor on American vessels to the exclusion of civilian labor."

"General MacArthur has agreed with the union's contention and has given assurances in the matter but there are some junior officers (labor baiters, no doubt) who are still desirous of putting this policy into operation and we have to be constantly alert to prevent the use of American forces."

HERE'S TROUBLE, SAYS FUNNYMAN

Chaplin Gets Subpoena In First Phase of Suit Over Paternity.

(By International News Service)

LOS ANGELES—Charlie Chaplin was under subpoena today to appear in court on June 17 to answer the opening phase of the paternity suit involving the unborn child of movie-struck Joan Barry.

The summons demands the famous funnyman's appearance to show cause why he should not provide for the child's support pending trial of the suit filed in superior court three days ago by the Barry girl's mother, Mrs. Gertrude E. Berry, as "guardian ad litem" for "John Doe Chaplin."

Chaplin—who has flatly stated "I am not responsible for Miss Barry's condition"—paved the way for service of the subpoena when he notified the sheriff's office that he was available at his Beverly Hills home for that purpose.

"Well, I guess here comes trouble," he remarked as the deputy sheriff bearing the summons approached his home. It was his only comment on the case other than denial of the charge.

The case covered by the subpoena was filed in the domestic relations division of the superior court as a companion action to the main suit. Besides support pending a decision of the main suit, it seeks to restrain Chaplin from disposing of any of his assets.

The main suit, to which Chaplin has not yet had time to file an answer, asks that the court declare him to be the child's father and that he be ordered to pay $10,000 for pre-natal care, $2,500 a month support and $5,000 attorney's fees.

Probate court employes today checked on the number of marriage licenses issued during May of this year and May of 1942. The total for both Mays surprisingly was the same with 35 issued. And from further check it seems the month of June for last year and this will be about the same. Seven licenses have been issued for the first week of this month, against the same nuumber during that period last year.

Eldon Becker, linotype operator at The News-Journal, has nothing but praise for the efficiency of the Red Cross home service department. In February he went to the local chapter and asked them to help him locate his brother, Wayne, an R. A. F. pilot. Wayne has been with the R. A. F. since 1939 and his relatives who had not heard from him for more than a year were becoming uneasy. Yesterday, about 3 months later, the Red Cross informed that his brother had been located and gave him the address at which he could be reached.

Either Mansfielders are less superstitious these days or hate to admit such a fact. At a downtown restaurant this morning many patrons were required to walk under a ladder to enter or leave the place. Air conditioning equipment was being repaired over the door, making it necessary for a workman to place the ladder in front of the door. Many hesitated but none refused to risk his luck.

The city's swimmers and tennis fans are going to find the parks ready for them Sunday. After a week's delay, caused by rusted water feeder lines, the Liberty park swimming pool will be opened at 9 a. m. Sunday, Frank Burton, city parks superintendent, said today. The pool was filled with more than 1,500,000 gallons of water last night and should be warm enough for swimming by tomorrow, Burton said. Tennis nets will be repaired and ready for use at the Maple lake park courts after a lot of trouble getting them in condition for the summer.

CONFESSES HE KILLED CHILD

Paroled Convict Admits That He Attacked Girl, 5, In Apartment.

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND — A full confession of the criminal attack and murder of Mary Jane Brady, 5, was in the hands of Cleveland police today following intensive grilling of Edward Ralph, 33, ex-convict now on parole.

The blood-stained body of the girl was found behind an apartment in which she lived early Friday morning following a search of over two hours by police called by Mrs. Dorothy Brady, 28-year-old invalid and widow and the people she was visiting with her daughter.

"I had her in the front room; I was muffling her outcry. I lost my head and attacked the girl and I picked her up then and carried her out in the back and rolled her down the hill in back of the apartment," Ralph admitted in his signed confession.

Ralph had been living with Mrs. Bernice Radloff, 28, for three weeks and the attack occurred in the living room of the Radloff apartment while Mrs. Radloff was in a "drunken stupor" in the hallway, according to Police Lieut. George Smythe. Her husband is a soldier stationed in Maryland.

Coroner S. R. Gerber stated that death had come from smothering, strangulation and internal hemorrhages.

The child's father was killed in an automobile accident two years ago and her mother was a cripple.

SLUG WAY OUT OF OHIO JAIL

But Three Portsmouth Youths Are Recaptured Quickly.

PORTSMOUTH — (AP) — Three Portsmouth youths slugged two men and escaped from Scioto county jail last night but obtained only 20 minutes of freedom, Jailer Landon Ball reported.

Ball said the trio went into action as he entered the bullpen, struck him and Frank James, a cook who attempted to intervene, and fled only to be apprehended on a city street by police summoned by radio. Eight others in the bullpen declined to participate in the break, Ball reported.

AN APPLE FOR EVE --

By Kathleen Norris

(Copyright, 1943)

CHAPTER XXVII

It had been sent from Chicago. They must have been flying. They had probably reached Mills Field some time in the morning and taken the bus to Indian Hill.

But Larry had had no answer to his telegram and he had not come. Loveday was aghast at the mischance.

She was startled by the sound of the telephone bell. There was another telegram for her. Loveday's spirit eased itself into complete relief and thankfulness as she grasped its meaning.

"Grounded in Cheyenne," it said. "Expect three of us for lunch Saturday. Sorry about delay. Love. Larry."

Saturday, day after tomorrow! Everything was all right again.

The table was set on the terrace, and Loveday, when Larry and his guests arrived, was flushed with running in and out of the kitchen and up and down stairs and looked her prettiest in dark blue linen, with her soft brown gold-tipped hair braided about her head.

The meeting was as casual as if they had been parted for eight hours rather than as many weeks. Larry looked surprisingly well in a cadet's aviation uniform; the other two men were ensigns from Canada; Larry had joined the Canadian flying forces, he told her, and was in training near Toronto. Hugh joined them almost immediately, and the talk became all of war. Ensign Anders and Ensign Waite were eager to get away to service in the mother country.

"This is a grand old place you have here, Mrs. Ingersoll."

"This was our grandfather's place; his father built it—when was it, Hugh?"

"Sixties sometime. Eighteen-seventy, maybe. The cupola and the millwork ought to date it," Hugh said.

"Pretty nearly everything is raised on the place, isn't it?" Larry said with the satisfied air of the householder.

"Well, let's see. The chickens and the corn, the lettuce and tomatoes, yes. But the flour in the bread, no." Loveday smiled. "Larry seems so changed, or is it just that I haven't seen him?" the uniform and the trim haircut were extremely becoming.

While the men ate, Loveday dressed the children and brought them down to the terrace. Betsey and Martha crowded on their father's lap.

"Beat it now, kids," Larry said after a few minutes, getting to his feet; "we're going out to see the camp with Hugh, and Waite and Anders will stay there," he said. "But I'll be back for dinner. We can all get in your car, can't we, Hugh? Ought I telephone Captain Williams if I want to catch him? The thing is, he's anxious to get hold of all this—"

His voice dwindled as he went toward the car. Loveday, left alone with the children, felt a little dazed. She had not wanted to make a scene before newcomers, but after all, Larry had not even taken the truble to tell her that he had entered the Canadian Air Force. Not even a post card had come to his wife when the ambition of his life had been gratified.

"Dearest," Larry said when the men returned; "we've got to go south tonight. Waite and Anders and I are supposed to get started back with a bomber, Monday morning, and on account of our being delayed Thursday we're late now. We're catching the Lark in San Jose, so if you can give me some supper about 7 I'll pick up the others and be on my way."

"Oh, Larry!" she said, automatically using a wife's air of protest and disappointment.

About 6 o'clock when she was upstairs with the children he came up from the library where he had been talking with Hugh and, while taking a shower in the most comfortable fashion imaginable, wandering in and out of her room and the nursery, asked her if she had perfected her plans for the apartment she was going to partition off from the second floor of the house.

"I'm wondering if it seems as reasonable to you as to me, Larry," she said. Then gradually, she told of her thoughts concerning Chris. He was widowed, and always liked her, adored the children and it might be smart to face conditions and not drag on, as so many did living half lives, never quite happy.

"What would you propose to do with the children?" he asked finally.

"Well, take them, of course. He has this wonderful place on Long Island. But if you or your mother—" She stopped short. She didn't mean this. "I just wanted you to thinks of it," she said uncomfortably; "it's not a plan—it's not definite, of course."

"Think you'd be happier?" he asked now briefly. Her cheeks reddened.

"Well, I don't know. But Chris is an important person. And it doesn't seem fair to you or to him either, not to let you know what's —what I feel—what—"

"What's going on between him and my wife," Larry finished grimly. "Now, I'll tell you" he said, his dressing completed, "there's something kind of disgusting about a married woman with small kids who tears the whole thing up and goes off with another man. Maybe you'd get away with it, but lots don't. You'd get the kids, I guess, because they're so little and they need you. I can't give them a home until this war is over, anyway. But the St. Georges won't be so crazy over the whole thing, and don't you fool yourself they will.

"I'm going to kiss the kids good-night — and good-bye," he added. "And then I'll go down, but I'll tell you what my solution would be; this flying business isn't the healthiest life in the world. I'm in it, and I'm going to stay in it until it's over. Wouldn't it be more dignified, more up your street, as Waite says, to skip the divorce and the talk and the arguments and the dragging of my children about and give me a little chance to get myself killed? I give you my word that after this little talk I'll be as quick about it as I can be."

He went out, closing the door.

Chris came to Indian Hill a few days later, for the first time giving no other excuse for his appearance there than he wanted to see Loveday.

He walked into the dining room quietly, nodding at her with an appreciative smile in his eyes and taking a seat to watch her feed the children.

"I didn't hear your car!" Loveday began.

"I should think not. I could hear the children babbling as soon as I stopped the engine."

"They're all dying of sleep They've been gardening with me all morning. I'll go up with them, Chris, and be down in five minutes. My hair has been slowly slipping"

"It looks very nice that way," Chris said mildly.

They lunched together, loitering and talking, talking, talking. Afterward he said he must go up to camp to see Hugh for a little while, but he returned to join her and the children again while they were up in the barn inspecting a wet new calf.

But after dinner, when they went back to the library fire and the old house was wrapped in silence and darkness except for the subdued light of one lamp and the glow of the coals, he seated himself on the old brocaded sofa that was set facing the hearth and touched the space behind him with his hand.

"Larry was here, wasn't he, last week? Hugh told me."

"Saturday, yes. Did Hugh mention that he is in the Canadian Air force?"

"Yes. A grand thing for him to do. And that," Chris said, "has made a difference, hasn't it, in the way you feel toward him?"

"I don't know that his being in the air force has made a difference," she said thoughtfully, "but something he said did, he was angry. He felt you had an advantage, that you are rich, Chris, and famous, and able to give me—to give any woman—everything she could want, and that it wasn't fair?"

"No, it's not fair, of course," he agreed quitely.

"But life isn't often fair. One man is sweating in a black mine to give his children poor bread that tastes of coal dust, and another is a king with 20 palaces and 300 changes of clothing. We can't help that."

"No, but we can try to bolonce it; we can play fair," she offered.

"If the whole world wasn't so full of divorce," he said, still without any particular emphasis, "if everyone didn't accept it as part of our way of life, it would be different! But we live in a generation that can correct youthful mistakes. If a girl like you blunders into marriage at 20, finds a few years later that there is a happier, a wider prospect opening before her—"

He paused, patted her hand for a moment without looking at her.

"You see, I love you so horribly, my dear," he said.

"It isn't what the world or what anyone except myself would think," she began with a little difficulty. "It's that—I have to live with myself, Chris. And I promised, and I am his wife, and there are my children."

"I know," he said. "I know." And for a while they were both silent. Chris moved a little and put his arm about her shoulders.

"I want you to understand something," he presently began. "It is enough for me now to know that such a woman as you exists. It's enough to think about you and now and then to see you and come here and hear your voice. I don't care whether you're splitting apricots or spooning mush into Owen or rushing in and out of the kitchen with pans of biscuits—it's enough that you're here."

She settled her head against his shoulder; one hand lay in his hand.

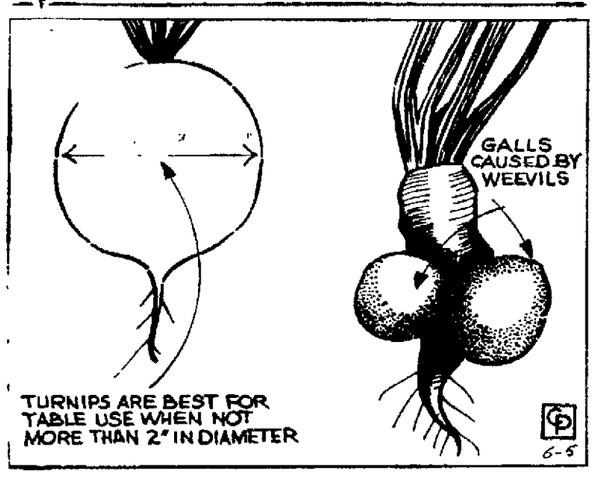
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



"Follow-Up Crops" for Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association.

A "FOLLOW-UP" planting system can be employed to make the Victory garden a complete success, especially if space is limited.

Turnips are considered an excellent "fill-in" or "follow-up" vegetable. They can be planted in vacant spaces where early planted seeds have failed to sprout or they can be used to follow an early crop.

Like all quick-growing vegetables, turnips, to be at their best, should be used for the table when not more than two or three inches in diameter, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. As turnips grow larger they become tough and woody and the flavor stronger.

Plant turnip seeds about ¼ to ½ inch deep in the soil. When the plants reach a height of two or three inches thin them, leaving about five or six inches between the plants. The thinnings make delicious boiled greens.

When harvesting turnips burn any which are found to be deformed by swellings such as illustrated. These swellings are caused by the gall weevil. The soil in which deformed turnips have grown should be treated with quick lime to kill the insect gall weevils. Use one bushel of lime to a square rod of soil area.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

Marguerite Speas Studios to Present Seventh Annual Review

135 Dancers Cast In Co-Operative Club Sponsored Show

The Mansfield Cooperative Club is sponsoring Marguerite Speas' seventh dance review, "Rhythm in the Park," to be staged Monday, June 7, in Mansfield Senior High auditorium.

Culminating a season's Speas Studio instructions, the show presents 135 local youngsters in a review spiced with rhythmic variety. Charles Calhhan, well known realtor and member of the Cooperative group will act as Master of Ceremonies.

Proceeds from the ticket sale will go toward the purchase of equipment for the School of the Deaf, the sponsor's pet project.

Miss Marguerite Speas has instructed all who are cast in the show and personally directed all dance routines. She is the only local girl directing and teaching a dancing school in Mansfield, having graduated from the Senior High school here with the class of '36.

Miss Speas continued her study of the dance begun at the age of 5 years, in the Ned Wayburn School in New York City that summer, returning to Mansfield to open her own school in September of that year.

After seven years the success of the Marguerite Speas Studio is undisputed.

Miss Speas instructs classes in all phases of the dance including tap, ballet, acrobatic, toe, toe-tap and exhibition ballroom. Instruction will be discontinued during the summer months, work to be resumed in September.

The curtain rises on a park scene in "Rhythm in the Park," providing the theme for the show. Nurse maids stroll on stage to the tune of that old favorite, "In the Good Old Summer Time." They wheel baby carriages holding four-year-old tots who later stage a clever exhibition of ballet, acrobatic and tap routines.

A group of older children come from school to the park to display other versatile acrobatic stunt-steps and finally as dusk settles and the park lights appear, a street gamin arrives to lean against a lamp post to wait for his moll and together they do a convincing interpretation of an Apache dance.

Specialty numbers make up the greater part of Act One. Among these is a dance by a five-year-old tapster in overalls and red bandana handkerchief; a Colonial dance done to Paderewski's Minuet; an acrobatic, "At the Old Swimming Hole," dancers appearing in bathing suits, and a clever brother and sister act.

Spotlighted number of the show is a "June Wedding" at the beginning of which wedding guests tap out their congratulations to the bride and groom—girls in dainty pastels, boys wearing white linen coats and dark trousers in typical June wedding style.

Flower girls are fetching ballerinas in lime green bouffant skirts, wearing halos of yellow roses and matching wrist corsages. Bridesmaids appear prettily in orchid ballet skirts and picture hats with long green streamers and wear corsages of summer garden flowers.

These attendants make a lovely background for the bride in brief white satin skirt and veil of illusion who sings "For Me and My Gal" with the groom.

At the beginning of Act Two in which a gold drop is used for background, stroblite illuminates key parts of costumes in a unique "Firefly" number in which eight little ladies do an effective hoop dance in the dark.

A group of novelty numbers complete the review, closing with a patriotic military finale.

Helen Scott and Amanda Mowry are pianists for the review and the Mansfield All Girl Orchestra directed by Will Kurtz with studios at Franklin and Park avenue east, will play during intermissions.

Mrs. Elizabeth Speas, mother of Marguerite, has designed all costumes for the show and executed them in clever fashion besides aiding immeasurably with plans for the review.

Miss Speas will leave for New York City soon to study with Joseph Levinoff of Steinway Hall. She plans to work on ballet, toe and Spanish dancing.

Information regarding the Marguerite Speas Studio of Dance may be had by dialing 1616-1 during the next period of registration, August 16 to 31, classes to begin soon after.

MRS. G. WATSON WRITES TO 200 SERVICE MEN

Letters Received Reveal Marked Interest In Local Events.

Mrs. Gordon Watson is doing her bit for morale by corresponding with more than 200 service men in outposts all over the world.

An original idea of Mrs. Watson's, it all began some months ago when she began sending mail to a small circle of acquaintances in the Army and Navy.

Replies urged her to lengthen her mailing list until finally realizing that her letters were really appreciated, she invited the public to leave addresses of service men at the Swank and Watson store, agreeing to send a card each month to these boys.

In compliance with this request, scores of addresses were turned in and Mrs. Watson began sending cards all over the world . . . to England, Ireland, Tunisia and Guadalcanal as well as what she believes now must be nearly every army post in the States.

A very large percentage of these greeting cards were answered with correspondence of such impelling interest, Mrs. Watson says, that she is now thoroughly interested in the project from a personal standpoint.

She is constantly on the alert these days for any scrap of news of general interest about town that can be inserted in letters to dozens of boys she's never seen. They seem eager to hear the least bit of chatter from the home town, Mrs. Watson says, and it keeps her busy answering requests for information from Mansfield.

Despite the success of the idea which has grown into a real task, even for so vivacious and energetic a person as Mrs. Watson, she is still asking for more . . . more addresses for her mailing list. This, because she realizes now, more than ever before, how the boys must enjoy getting mail, even from a stranger.

You, too, may leave names and addresses of service men at Swank and Watson's, 89 North Main, where you will also find an arresting collection of gifts for men in the services. These include duffle and furlough bags, leather picture frames, stationery with army and navy insignia, service pins and a number of other miscellaneous gifts, both handsome and practical, any one of which Mrs. Watson will be happy to wrap and mail for you.

Mrs. Watson is managing the Swank and Watson store for her husband, Gordon Watson, now engaged in defense work, and his partner, Corp. E. R. Swank, serving with the armed forces in North Africa.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1943.

Drive carefully tomorrow—or maybe you'll want to save gas for a 50-mile vacation trip.

It is announced that women are going to "dress plainly" from now on—which may, possibly, require less lipstick and fingernail dope.

The island of Attu is so uniformly described as a "bleak, forbidding and unlovely spot" that it may also be assumed to have no chamber of commerce to sing its praises.

Lewis Will Permit Miners To Work

WITH the consent of John L. Lewis, coal miners will again resume work Monday, after a week's strike which resulted in an estimated 10,000,000 tons of coal being left unmined.

Return to work will be on instructions given yesterday afternoon by Mr. Lewis, rather than on the order of President Roosevelt, thus leaving the situation in the hands of the mine chief to determine whether coal production shall continue for the duration of war or be again interrupted in another few weeks or months.

It will be noted that in ordering miners to return to work Mr. Lewis made no concession in the matter of authority of the War Labor Board and berated members of that agency of government as "little strutting men who sought to place upon the miners the responsibility for this stoppage, which rests actually on their own smug shoulders."

However expensive the lesson has been, this experience must surely have taught the people of the United States—and their representatives in congress—that some fair law should be immediately enacted which will not only take care of such situations as have arisen in this mine strike but in all group work stoppages which either directly or indirectly affect the national war effort.

Such a bill is now before congress but the form in which it was passed by the house yesterday was so much amended that it could scarcely be recognized as the original Connally bill which the senate passed a month ago.

It may well be regretted that any measure, national or state, which is designed to make labor organizations and their members subject to the same laws which regulate other individuals or associations is objected to as "unfair" and its supporters chosen as targets for threatened opposition at "the next election."

All that should be asked by any group is fairness, not favoritism, and lawmakers should have no hesitancy in acting in behalf of the general welfare rather than catering to any minority pressure group.

Famine Ahead If Mistakes Continue

SECRECY maintained at the international food conference, just concluded at Hot Springs, Va., leaves Americans in the dark as to the extent to which this country will be expected to feed the world, during and after the war.

Only a few years ago, as New Dealers went into action, little pigs were being killed, crops were being plowed under and farmers were being paid to NOT cultivate their fields—while many people in this country, and an estimated two-thirds of the world's population, were getting along on insufficient food.

Now there is a shortage of food in this country, with the civilian population required to cut down in order that the armed forces can have adequate supplies, needs of our Allies met and a reserve kept ready to feed victims of Axis aggression in occupied territory.

So many factors enter into annual volume of farm production, aside from the present manpower shortage, that no accurate estimate can be made of this year's output—on which much depends in the matter of properly feeding our armies first, and our civilian population afterward.

Louis Bromfield, author-farmer, has given much study to this subject and his article in the current issue of Collier's gives national publicity to views that he has frequently expressed locally.

As seen by Bromfield, and by other competent and unbiased observers, the food outlook for the United States, during the closing months of 1943 and through 1944, is gloomy—with real danger of a food famine.

People of America, in the main, have accepted rationing philosophically, and will undoubtedly go much further in cutting down their individual and family food requirements in order to feed our armies and help our allies—but they are also fully aware that food production in this country cannot be sufficiently expanded to feed the entire world.

While it is too late to correct past mistakes of Washington bureaucrats it may not be too late to introduce some sound common sense and intelligent understanding into the administration of agricultural affairs in Washington, and in such distribution of food as will not result in a famine in the country in which it is produced.

Breaking Bad News Gently

TO Glen Park post of the American Legion in Gary, Ind., goes credit for inaugurating a wartime service which seems worthy of spread throughout the country.

Intent is to lighten the blow on families of service men who are reported killed, wounded or missing, and this is accomplished by having members of the Legion deliver casualty telegrams instead of using the impersonal medium of a telegraph messenger.

A plan has been worked out under which the Legion, instead of the addressee, first receives the telegram from the war department.

The legionnaire living nearest the stricken family, calls, introduces himself, breaks the news as gently as possible, extends sympathy and offers any services needed.

This is another of the American Legion's praiseworthy services. It evidences understanding of the severe shock a blunt casualty notification causes an unprepared family.

"It must be so," observed a reader after noting Eleanor Roosevelt's broad hint that WAVES, SPARS and members of the women's auxiliary of the marine corps are soon to be assigned to overseas service.

Considering the distances involved in reaching offices in the mammoth Pentagon building in Washington, it's a wonder some employes haven't started a move for portal-to-portal pay.

Always read the directions on the package of dehydrated food—remember the experience of the small boy who ate dried apples and then drank a couple of glasses of water.

Russia is appealing for more watches—but they'll have to fight their way through to the watch on the Rhine.

BETTER THAN HE COULD DO IT HIMSELF

Much Hinges on Soldiers' Views

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—It would seem that the recent polls, which indicate that President Roosevelt will get a fourth term if the war is still on but will lose if peace has been attained, should have been taken on a different basis. The persons polled should have been asked a third question: "How will you vote if the war with Germany is over by election time, but the war with Japan is still being pressed?"

That question should have been asked because, as pointed out in previous dispatches, the consensus of experts is that the war with Germany will be over by 1944 election time, assuming no terrific upset, while by the same token the war with Japan will still be going strong.

It is almost impossible for most people to forecast accurately how they themselves will think under a certain set of circumstances varying sharply from those under which they are living.

It has never been questioned that a large majority of the people of this country were strong for the League of Nations when Woodrow Wilson went to Paris. But the election of 1920 was construed at the time as virtually a mandate against the League.

WE HAD another element of surprise right after the last war. The U. S. soldiers returning from Europe were much less anti-British than had been expected, but were bitterly anti-French. Not all of them, of course, but the changes in this direction were astonishing.

There is no way of telling—now—what the attitude of the soldiers who come back will be. And the strong probability is that a lot will come back before the presidential election. Some months ago it was stated officially that more than a million U. S. troops had been transported overseas. At about the same time the official information was that about 200,000 were in the Southwest Pacific.

It can safely be assumed that by now the number sent overseas already vastly exceeds one million, and that by the time Germany collapses it will reach a much higher figure.

So while it is merely a guess, it is not improbable that more than a million U. S. soldiers, from every county in every state in the Union, will be back at home when the ballots are cast next year. And on how they are talking—about the conduct of the war, about world peace plans, etc., depends pretty nearly everything politically.

MIND YOU, it is not necessarily what is true that will be important. It will be what the soldiers think when they first come home. In the last war most experts thought General Pershing did a swell job. That is the general opinion today. But seldom has a political boom flattened out more dismally than that started for Pershing by a few admirers in early 1920.

Incidentally the polls indicated that Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York was well out ahead as choice of the Republican voters for president, and that he could beat Roosevelt if the war was over. This is more substantial than public reactions to the war and to Roosevelt because events are not so likely to upset it.

This does not mean that Dewey will be nominated. His friends still insist that he would rather wait. He does not have to enter the primaries, as he did, with such success, four years ago. But it does show that he probably can have the nomination if he changes his mind. Nothing that happens in the war is likely to hurt him.

Listen World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Blessing or Blight?

THIS business of co-education . . . what do YOU think of it? Suppose you were the parent of a lively, lovable youngster, with the usual romantic yens—how would YOU wish to have him or her educated—with the opposite sex—or segregated?

There's a question that's raising plenty of Cain in Atlanta, Ga., as I write this—as the further existence of several high schools depends upon a vote shortly to be taken. Don't know what the result will be by the time you read this, but the youngsters have asked for my slant—so here it is, for whatever it's worth to any puzzled parent.

Naturally, I'm in favor of co-education, since I was born and raised in California, where open association between the sexes has always been the accepted social pattern. Even without such a background, I am sure I would still favor it as a mother and sponsor for Youth in general.

No question about the relationship between the sexes being the most important factor in normal life. It determines happiness in marriage . . . harmony in social contacts . . . success in industry. And it seems plain that the only proper time—indeed, the only practical time—to acquire such an adjustment is during adolescence, when youngsters have both enough time and elasticity to adapt themselves to each other.

Many parents will doubt this. They'll point to the happy marriages of their own youth—in the 80's, 90's and early 1900's—as proof that boys and girls who were separated in school days can be supremely happy in wedlock. But the marital demands of 1898 and 1943 are entirely different—and worlds apart!

The wife and husband of 1898 were bound only by affection for each other and their children. The average modern wife and husband share every industrial burden, every political interest, every social responsibility. They must speak a common language . . . feel a common emotional reaction . . . if their marriage is to be successful. Where better can they learn that language than in a common school life? How can they ever learn it easily or completely unless they learn it then?

"But they'll get boy-crazy, girl-crazy if they're in school together!"

Not any more, or as much, than if they're apart. Romantic reaction isn't an abnormal mishap, to be avoided at all cost it's a natural process which no power on earth can stop.

Boys are going to dream about girls . . . girls are going to hanker after boys . . . though you place them poles apart. If they are studying, playing and planning life together when this great change comes upon them, the trend is toward easy, happy, almost unconscious adjustment!

If, however, they are forced to live apart during their most plastic years . . . if they meet and mate after a period of feverish, frustrated excitement and curiosity, they are apt to have an unconscious emotional hang-over of suspicion and timidity which will mar their life-long relationship.

These aren't idle theories. They are serious convictions based on 25 years of motherhood and professional work with the service to young people. Daily, from 500 to 1,000 letters cross my desks . . . scores of youngsters crowd my 'phone or office. Youngsters whose main preoccupation whatever their superficial pose—is success in love. And, invariably, those who have been educated together, approach each other more naturally, achieve companionship more quickly and easily.

At least nine-tenths of our divorces are due—not to the conventional charges outlined in our statutes—but to ignorance, mistrust and emotional maladjustment between the sexes. They do not beat each other . . . do not cheat . . . But they have never learned to laugh together—to be good sports and generous friends.

So my vote's for co-education.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Tuesday, June 5, 1923.

Anniversary of "June frosts," which did much damage to crops in Ohio and several midwest states in 1859.

Moorhead & Buchan purchased "old Nicholson" property, 38-40 West Second street.

Improved roads in Richland county were being marked with white line in middle to separate traffic (start of this practice).

Miss Ruth Loeb, of Mansfield, and Tracy Oppenheim, of Toledo, were married at the Elks home by Rabbi David Alexander.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Zitzer went to Chicago to attend National Music Industries convention.

Miss Marie Shafer and Lloyd Eastman were married by Rev. Foster C. Anderson.

Howard Gross and Fred Harbaugh bought the S. N. Maze grocery at 214 East Second street.

TODAY IN HISTORY

The first balloon ascension made by man occurred on this date in 1783 in France. Another event marked on this date is the birth in 1775 of William Sprague, who introduced calico printing.

Dave Boone Says:

THE pay-as-you-groan tax has been passed and a fellow ought to get some kind of a rebate if he can decode it without assistance. There's so much "whichever is the lower" stuff in it that when you read it in a hurry it sounds like an article on Pullman berths.

* * *

Still it ain't quite as complicated as the latest bridge rules and it's a little less involved than the notations on the back of any insurance policy. That's something.

There should be monuments everywhere to Dr. Allan Dafoe. He debunked a lot of austere, hard-to-get baby specialists who can only be reached through three lines of secretaries and who come higher than gilt-edged stocks.

* * *

The old style general practitioner who could get up any hour of the night, travel any distance in any weather, do his job well and never soak anybody has pretty well disappeared, but the little Callander doctor glorified the profession.

* * *

He not only saw the five babies through, but baptized them, went for a priest for the mother and helped with the house cleaning. I liked that part of his story where he said: "The father had disappeared."

Summary of Week's Happenings

Byrnes Moves to Unify Activities As Head of Newly Created Agency

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMERICA had been in the first World war less than a year when the need became sharp for a war cabinet and President Wilson obtained a law giving himself full power.

Last week, with World War II rounding its 18th month for America, Franklin D. Roosevelt named able, 63-year-old James F. Byrnes to head a six-man office of war mobilization with authority to straighten out the home front.

Most observers felt it was not a moment too soon.

For while our arms abroad achieved spectacular successes, the war against inflation was being lost at home. Mounting discords threatened production, the utilization of manpower, the entire domestic economy.

To former Supreme Court Justice Byrnes, a veteran of congress and since last October director of economic stabilization, the president gave power to unify the activities of federal agencies responsible for military and civilian supplies; to develop programs for the maximum use of the nation's natural, industrial and human resources, and for the stabilization of the civilian economy.

As head of the OWM, Byrnes was empowered to issue directives necessary to carry out the board's decisions.

In World War I, it has been estimated, price increases caused almost seven in every ten dollars of the nation's total war bill. Prices rose 240 per cent between 1914 and 1920.

Today Inflation is problem number one on the OWM agenda.

The office of price administration, under fire in congress for having issued so many orders to retailers that it was "humanly and physically impossible to keep track of them," faced a wave of quarrels within, accusations from without that rationing and price-control mechanisms were breaking down.

Food prices, despite ceilings, rationing and appeals, stood more than 43 per cent higher than in 1939.

With the cost of living soaring, new taxes a certainty, agitation for higher wages has added another ominous crack to the government's anti-inflation dam. Directly tied to OWM's inflation battle is the production problem, heretofore in the hands of the war labor board and Donald Nelson's WPB.

Succeeding Byrnes as economic stabilization director is tax-expert Fred M. Vinson, former congressman and federal judge. He is expected to be invaluable, as an OWM member, in helping congress devise ways of obtaining $13,000,000,000 still lacking to make up the 16 billion dollars which the president has asked congress to add to the present 35 billion dollar tax yield.

The latter figure, it has been pointed out, is more than the total cost to the United States of World War I.

OWM, in addition to Byrnes and Vinson, consists of Henry L. Stimson, secretary of war; Frank Knox, secretary of the navy; Harry Hopkins, chairman of munitions assignments; and Donald Nelson, chairman of the war production board.

Foreseeing that his job is largely to free President Roosevelt's hands for conduct of the war, Mobilization Chief Byrnes said his office would provide "a place where all the various government organizations and agencies can go to settle things around the conference table."

At Home

Fighting Figures.

Bad news for the Axis, European and Asiatic departments alike, was packed in his first speech as director of war mobilization by James F. Byrnes.

"The 100,000th plane manufactured since we began our war production program came off the assembly line today."

"In the month of May this year we produced three times as many pieces of artillery for ground troops as we did in all 19 months of the last war."

"We are building merchant ships four times as fast as they are being sunk."

Mr. Byrnes warned that Americans "have a long, hard road ahead" and "we must learn to work, to fight, to sacrifice as we have never done before." But, he said, "We have at length caught up with the Axis. . . . We are now girding ourselves not for a single attack on a single front, but for many attacks on many fronts, both in the European theater of war and in the Pacific."

Holiday's Toll.

Traffic-barren highways in the mountains were dotted with New Yorkers sitting forlornly on their suitcases waiting transportation home. And, as Monday afternoon wore on, hordes of out-of-town visitors jammed bus and railway stations in New York city, also trying to get home.

Neither railroads nor bus lines (cut 20 per cent by an ODT order) could transport all the pleasure-seekers. Thousands were stranded over night.

Thus, for some, ended Memorial day, 1943, in the gas-shy urban east. In keeping with government requests, most Americans stayed at home. As a result, to a new low fell the nation's holiday death toll. Score: 230 fatalities against 304 last year, approximately 400 on a peacetime Memorial day.

Crisis In Coal.

As May came to an end 500,000 coal miners of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers stayed away from the pits because operators had refused their portal-to-portal pay demand.

Last minute negotiations in Washington broke down. The May 31st deadline came and passed, the nation ran into its most serious domestic crisis of the war.

The stoppage followed an earlier one on April 30, when an agreement between miners and owners expired. President Roosevelt ordered U. S. seizure and operation of the mines. Then Lewis agreed to a 15-day truce, during which the War Labor Board denied a $2 daily pay increase, made some concessions and ordered negotiations with the operators on underground travel pay.

Late Thursday, President Roosevelt, as commander-in-chief, ordered strikers to return to work Monday. Yesterday Lewis directed that mines be re-opened Monday.

Showdown In OPA.

Behind the busy scenes of the Office of Price Administration boiled one of the bitterest feuds of the war. Principals were two deputy administrators—tall, 34-year-old J. Kenneth Galbraith, former Princeton U. economics professor, and husky Lou Maxon, Detroit advertising man serving OPA as a $1-a-year-man.

They disagreed over OPA policies and personnel, over the issue of compulsory grade labeling of canned goods. Galbraith threatened to quit if Maxon became right-hand man to OPA Boss Prentiss Brown. Maxon said he would like to give Galbraith 15 minutes to pack.

Washingtonians during the week chalked up a victory for Lou Maxon as Galbraith's resignation was announced.

Quotes

Frank Knox, secretary of navy: "The improvement in the war against the submarine was due to unnamed men in civilian clothes who study day and night to produce new weapons to combat submarines."

Wayne L. Morse, public member of the National War Labor Board: "Viewed from the standpoint of its damage to the war effort and its serious threat to the maintenance of government by law and order, this (coal) strike probably has no parallel in American history."

Abroad

Blasting the Ruhr.

To the U. S., the combined importance of a half-dozen war production cities could be no greater than the 100-mile triangle of the Ruhr valley is to Adolf Hitler.

Although Ruhr bombings have been carried out for weeks, the program of destruction did not reach its height until the Moehne and Eder dams were blasted early in May.

Then, while the flood waters from the Moehne lake still rolled through the lowlands, the RAF followed with some of the war's greatest attacks on Dortmund, Duesseldorf, Wuppertal and Essen, all bunched in the triangle. In one week 7,000 tons of bombs were dropped.

Nazi Fears.

As German radio spokesmen talked vaguely of having put the Allies on the "offensive," a Moscow commentator declared that the Allied planes had already "won the air war."

A growing feeling became evident that Germany, hurled out of Tunisia and backward on the Russian front, was reluctant to risk a new summer offensive in Russia while taking such a pounding from the west.

New Horizons?

Intriguing to U. S. airmen were the opportunities opened up by the capture of Attu.

While Rome radio announced the isle had no military value (Tokyo belatedly reached the same conclusion), Americans looked forward to (1) strangling the Jap force on Kiska, now outflanked, and (2) pressing westward to attack the enemy base at Paramushiro, an outpost of Japan proper.

That Kiska is doomed, either by starvation or assault, was a foregone conclusion. Paramushiro lies 630 nautical miles to the west, well within bombing range. Even Tokyo, 2,000 miles away, can be reached by Attu-based heavy bombers when its landing field is completed.

Farmer's Diary

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THE WHEEL HOE

A WHEEL HOE is a simple piece of workmanship, a universal tool. Like the universal joint in machinery, it seldom moves in a line straight ahead.

Everybody has one. We have. Our nearest neighbor has, and every victory gardener worthy of the name.

It has many uses. After our garden was plowed and fitted, I used the diminutive attachment to mark out the ground for early cabbage, carrots, beets, and tomato plants, sweet corn and even for potatoes . . . but this meant scoring two or three times in a single row to get it deep enough.

During early spring the five and the three-year-old pulled it down from above the cornerib where I had thought it would be safe from prying eyes and eager hands. It wasn't. Next day was bright and sunny and they wheeled it everywhere. Sometimes they turned it upside down and the littlest boy rode all around the thawing lawn. Then they tied a rope to the front, one pushed, the other pulled. The wheel went round . . . and round.

When I came home at evening I found ten furrows scarred across the lawn. I frowned, whereon the spokesman volunteered, "We'll plow 'em right back, daddy, from both sides."

The day the garden was ready, I hunted everywhere. No wheel hoe. At last I found it half buried in the ooze beneath the lily pads—instead of "beneath the daisies." With the garden rake, I fished it out but the string had swelled about the hub and the wheel was locked. After I cut it off, the wheel rim seemed strangely flattened between each spoke — "From rolling it up and down the gravel road," explained one boy, concisely. I managed to make it round again. They had had a splendid time.

Now they slipped off the tiny plow and attached the three-pronged weeder. The two older boys insert a broken hoe handle in a loop of rope in front and the five-year-old guides the cultivator and yells at his 'team,' as he bears on the handles.

An hour at a time is enough for all three, but the weeds disappear. Between times, to rest and refresh themselves, all four little boys trek down to Honey Creek and 'go swimming. (They are reaching the littlest boy to swim this year).

The wheel hoe is not only for such youngsters—who, by practice can use it well—it is for adults, too. It fills puny lungs with the ozone washed by rain and moistened by nightly dews. It expands the hollow chests and straightens the stooped, used regularly it reduces the waist line of the too corpulent.

The wheel hoe promotes benignly a ruddy tan, numerous blisters and worthy callouses. It is a great invention—a popular tool of victory. With it anyone can make his mark in the world.

been to London for further conferences with military leaders in the European theater of operations.

Up until today the whereabouts of the British premier since he concluded his talks with the American chief executive had been kept a strictly guarded secret.

Nogues Resigns As Moroccan Chief

ALGIERS —(AP)— Gen. Auguste Nogues presented his resignation as resident general of French Morocco to Gen. Henri Giraud today with the assertion he placed French unity above all other considerations and, in a message to Moroccans, defended his conduct in office.

(An Algiers radio broadcast recorded in London said that Gabriel Puaux, former French high commissioner in Syria, had been appointed to succeed Nogues.)

Seeking to explain why French troops under him in Morocco resisted the Allied landings, Nogues said in his message that: "Nov. 8, 1942, we had the duty of keeping our word. We performed our duty with sorrow. In acting thus we avoided German intervention. Having been disciplined up to the point of even sacrificing their sentiments, it is with enthusiasm that our troops have formed themselves again in one block and taken up the struggle at the side of the Allies against the common enemy.

Ousting of Nogues was one of the measures demanded by Gen. Charles De Gaulle, the fighting French leader.

Biggest Red Air Fleet Blasts Orel

MOSCOW—(U.P.)—Five hundred and twenty Soviet long-range bombers, the largest Russian air fleet ever sent against a single objective, turned the German-held bastion of Orel on the south-central front into a mass of flames Thursday night, it was announced today.

Returning pilots reported that fires were visible for 60 miles.

Railway trains, munitions depots and fuel dumps were hit with demolition bombs and terrific explosions were observed, a special Soviet communique said. Only one plane was lost.

Orel was the only German anchor point on the southern front to hold out in the face of the big Russian winter offensive.

at Akyab and carried out other widespread attacks.

American bombers also hammered the Japanese, blowing up enemy-controlled oil wells, an oil storage tank and a factory.

In China, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's victorious Chinese armies swept on unchecked in their spectacular counter-offensive on the upper Yangtze river front, recapturing the Japanese base at Kungan in southern Hupeh province.

Kungan lies 65 miles southeast of the main enemy base at Ichang which itself was under assault by Chinese troops.

A communique said the Chinese had captured an important point on the outer defenses of Ichang and wiped out more than half the Japanese garrison at Kungan.

Chinese Capture Jap Hupeh Base

CHUNGKING —(AP)— Unchecked Chinese forces recaptured Kungan, one of the bases in south Hupeh province from which the Japanese launched their abortive drive on the upper Yangtze front, the high command said in a communique tonight.

Kungan is 65 miles southeast of Ichang, the main Japanese base, and slightly south of the Yangtze.

The communique said more than half the enemy troops at Kungan were wiped out and the rest retreated.

The Chinese said they had captured an important point on the outer defenses of Ichang and repulsed a Japanese thrust to the north from Suihsien, about 100 miles northwest of Hankow.

Tojo Appeals For More War Spirit

(By United Press)

Premier Hideki Tojo is appealing to the Japanese people for an increased war spirit, Tokyo radio broadcasts indicated today.

A Tokyo report recorded last night by the federal communications commission quoted Tojo as telling the Japanese imperial rule assistance political society that the war was in a "decisive stage" and that the government was "looking forward to greater cooperation . . . on the part of the people on the home front."

TRANSIT STRIKE HITS CLEVELAND

Workers Tour System Urging Others To Quit.

CLEVELAND —(U.P.)— A strike of miscellaneous employes, including maintenance and repair crews, spread today throughout the Cleveland transit system, scene of a recent strike of streetcar motormen and conductors.

The strike was reported to have started with a walkout of eight men at the Harvard yards and within a short time 100 more employes had joined the walkout.

The strikers left the yards, began touring the system, and persuaded repair crews to leave their jobs at various points on the system.

tion were known to be opposed to Castillo because of his international policy, but others opposed him merely because he was supporting Robustiano Patron Costas, one of the richest men in Argentina, for the presidency. Among the latter group was said to be at least three men who had strong pro-Axis sympathies and who favored Castillo's neutrality.

The pro-democratic character of many other generals and admirals who went to the presidential palace (Casa Rosada) was clear-cut, however, and it was likely that their influence, if not their names, will appear when the final organization of the new government is announced.

Whatever the intentions of the junta, there was no doubt in the minds of upwards of 5,000 Argentine citizens who demonstrated in the Plaza de Mayo before government buildings as to what they wanted.

They stoned pro-Axis newspaper offices and raised a banner with the legend "Viva Democracia" before the gates of the presidential palace.

Altogether, casualties in the revolt were estimated unofficially at 32 killed and 70 wounded, including both soldiers and civilians.

The only real resistance encountered was in the suburbs of Buenos Aires, the garrison at the presidential palace laid down its arms without a struggle.

U. S. Expected To Recognize Regime

WASHINGTON —(INS)— With the Axis powers about to lose their last diplomatic foothold in the western hemisphere, the American government today was preparing to extend early recognition to the new pro-Allied regime in Argentina.

The swift success of the Argentine military revolt was hailed in authoritative quarters as a great victory for the United Nations.

Under the new regime, Argentina is expected shortly to sever diplomatic relations with Germany, Italy and Japan, and to co-operate more closely in the defense of the American hemisphere.

While Argentina's entry into the war is not foreseen in the near future, the severance of relations with the leading Axis powers will deal a staggering blow to their espionage activities in this hemisphere.

MILK DELIVERED

Pittsburghers Get Deliveries First Time In Four Days.

PITTSBURGH —(INS)— Thousands of Pittsburgh families received milk today for the first time in four days when members of the AFL-Milk Drivers' union called off their strike long enough to make their usual week-end double deliveries.

Final settlement of the walkout, however, remained uncertain as the drivers insisted today's deliveries were merely in accordance with the terms of a one-day truce, and added that they still were opposed to the skip-day plan of doorstep deliveries ordered by the ODT.

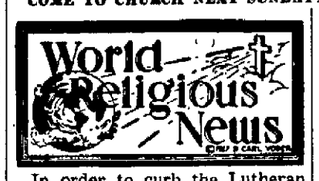
O. O. McIntire, a journalist, two days before his death wrote an article published in The News-Journal telling how he and his wife passing by a church were impelled by a strange impulse to it. He says that everything within being quiet and peaceful, he experienced a calmness that he had never felt before. The sincerity of the minister made a great impression in the use of the text, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee." He wondered why the church was not crowded and why he himself had been so indifferent to religion.

He became reminiscent. He thought of his ancestors and their faith. He closed his article declaring that it would probably be a long time before he would be in church again though he felt he would be benefited if he went. In two days he was dead. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY? —D. Carl Yoder.



In order to curb the Lutheran church in Norway, the clergy are now being drafted by the Nazis to engage in war work.

The annual cost of crime in the United States is estimated to be $15,000,000,000. This is an average of $120 per person. The greatest number of arrests are boys and girls between the ages of 16 and 24.

Figures just released by the Gideons, the Christian Commercial Men's Association of America, International, show that this missionary arm of the church has already been responsible for the placing of nearly 4,000,000 copies of the Word of God in the hands of men and women of our armed forces. The report issued at the close of December, 1942, shows this staggering volume of Bibles to have been personally presented to the armed forces in 21 months of activity. This represents, officials believe, the largest program of sound evangelism ever to be completed in so short a period of time.

Hoover, FBI head, reports increase in juvenile crime and indicates high pay, inadequate recreational facilities and lack of parental direction as causes.

The study of the Bible has been made compulsory in all Protestant high schools in the province of Quebec.

There are now 4,700 conscientious objectors in Civilian Public Service camps, Paul Comly French, of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, has announced.

Plans are under way to increase the power of the Vatican City radio station "so that the Holy Father's voice can be heard in all parts of the globe," according to the Tablet, a London Catholic weekly.

It is revealed in a booklet, "What Do You Know About Inter-Church Aid?" that $117,000 was received during 1942 by the American office of the Central Bureau for Relief of the Evangelical Churches of Europe (297 Fourth Avenue, New York), and that a minimum of $100,000 is needed during 1943. Most of the disbursements this year, like those in 1942, are to be for relief of war-stricken members of Evangelical churches in Switzerland, Greece, Spain, Portugal and Britain.

Whenever "influence" or a "pull" gets for any one a special consideration, or party membership is taken into account and favors granted upon that score, justice is defeated and some one is sure to be worsted by such a consideration. Addison says, "To be perfectly just is an attribute of the divine nature; to be so to the utmost of our abilities, is the glory of man."

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary cocked a quizzical eyebrow at Olina, evidently sharing my thought—and, I knew, Katharine's, as well—that a light note injected into the doleful discussion we had been having, would be most desirable.

"I'll refer your request to the committee," she said, with a side glance at Katharine and me. "What say, gals? Shall we let her telephone?"

"I should say yes," I decided gravely, as if weighing the matter, "provided she has the ten cent service charge with her."

"I agree to that," Katharine said with equal seriousness. But Olina, obviously relaxed, was on her way to the telephone, with a derisive gesture in Mary's direction.

Telephones For Escort.

"Oh! Marie!" she said, in answer to words at the other end of the wire, "I did not know you were back. I am over at Mrs. Veritzen's. Will you please send the guard after me? Thank you. Au revoir!"

As she replaced the receiver, she turned to me. "What do you wish me to tell Maman about that message?" she asked.

"Only what you told me," I decided promptly. "Tell her the circumstances under which you received the message, your conviction that it was in Georges' handwriting, and repeat to her as much of the message as you can remember, no doubt all of it."

A quick flush told me that before she had brought the message to me, she had read it so frequently that she knew every word of it.

"Tell her that I do not think Georges wrote it, that I have asked to have my father see it, and that he will bring it over as soon as possible. But," I cautioned finally, "say no word about the danger which I believed you would have incurred if you had answered the summons. My father will enlarge upon that better than I can. Nor, if I were you, would I confess that for a minute you were impelled to obey the summons without consulting anybody. After all, you didn't go, and—"

Mary Intervenes.

"And what she doesn't know, won't hurt her," Mary finished. "After all, Lina, that's what 'Auntie Madge really means, but never in the world would she say it that way. She'd use words so lengthy, so beautiful and with such fine shades of meaning that nobody ever would suspect her of being so brash as to 'cover' you."

"Mary! Mary!" I protested. "You are simply incorrigible."

But I had no time for any further words, as the knock of the guard sounded on the door. When Olina had gone out under his escort, and the door closed after her, I rose.

"I must get this note into my father's hands without delay," I said, turning to leave the room.

"Are you sure Redfield is corralled until theater time?" Katharine asked quickly. "Otherwise you must not go over alone."

"Absolutely," I said. "Adams will see to that."

"Then—you may go," Katharine said, affecting a grandiloquent manner, and I realized how my father's promise of a coming reunion with her husband had given a fillip to her spirits which even the dreaded prospect of the coming interview with Ruth Hayes could not wipe out.

Madge Leaves.

"A thousand thanks for your gracious permission," I told her with an airy wave of my hand as I went out of the door.

My knock on the apartment door brought Noel, and as he admitted me, I saw that my father was not in the room.

"Where--?" I began, and Noel anticipated what I was going to ask.

"He's in the other apartment," he said, and I went swiftly to the camouflaged door and knocked. My father opened it, and I saw Adams seated at a table with pencils, paper and what looked to me like blanks for cross-word puzzles scattered on it.

I suppose I looked my surprise at seeing Adams, for my father said quickly: "Winters is attending to Redfield," and then added, "Is your business urgent, daughter?"

I knew what that meant. He did not wish to be interrupted for anything not of supreme importance. But I knew I was not making a mistake when I answered steadily.

"Yes, most urgent, I think. But it will not detain you but a minute or two."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHEN TO DEPART

THERE IS only one standard kind of situation in which it will pay you to depart from the established practice of leading the fourth-best card when you open a low one from your long suit against a No Trump contract. That is when you are trying to mislead the declarer and reckon that the deception will not harm your side by also misleading your partner. It is hard to think of such cases except when you have a partner who is not a card reader and face a declarer who is.

	♠ J 8 ♥ 10 7 4 2 ♦ K Q 7 ♣ A 8 3 2
♠ A 7 5 ♥ A Q 9 8 ♦ 9 6 5 ♣ 10 6 5	N W E S	♠ K 3 2 ♥ J 6 5 ♦ J 8 3 2 ♣ J 7 4
	♠ Q 10 8 6 4 ♥ K 3 ♦ A 10 4 ♣ K Q 9

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT

At one of the tables in a duplicate game, West was a player who disdains fourth-best leads frequently, especially when up against an able declarer. So, though he led his heart 8 East could not count on its being a fourth best. So, after the dummy played low, he put on his J. the K winning. That made the contract for the declarer, as the defenders could take only two heart tricks, plus two spades, the heart 10 being set up for the fourth round of that suit.

When East knew his partner's lead as a fourth best, application of the Rule of Eleven beat the contract. Subtracting the 8 from 11 left three as the number of cards outside the leader's hand which would beat his card. Two of those higher ones were in sight, so the declarer had only one card which would beat it, certainly the A or K. Consequently East played his 6 on the trick saving the J. When West later won a trick with the spade A, he led the heart 9 to the J. East returned the 5, so that the A and Q plus the spade K, set the contract.

THEATERS

Subs In Action.

The new technicolor picture now at the Ohio, "Crash Dive," has many authentic shots of submarines in action. The film, which stars Tyrone Power, was made largely at the United States naval base at New London, Conn. Power is seen as a junior officer who leads his men on a daring raid of enemy shipping. It is his last picture for the duration. The picture was filmed with the co-operation of the U. S. Navy, and presents an accurate picture of life aboard a submarine. Anne Baxter, Dana Andrews, James Gleason, Dame May Whitty are seen in the supporting cast.

Laughs Way to Top.

Rochester believes that if you laugh the world laughs with you, but if you weep it's a one-man job. He prefers crowds, having kept them laughing with him since he started his career as a chorus boy in 1919. He depends largely for his wide acclaim upon two factors—his ready repartee and his peculiar voice. Rochester plays the part of Little Joe in the Madison's top attraction, "Cabin in the Sky," screen version of the Broadway stage production. "Prelude to War," is the co-attraction.

Skaters Perform.

Frick and Frack, recognized as the best comedy team on ice, lived during their entire boyhood years in adjoining houses in Basle, Switzerland, and learned to skate on a large pond which covered their back yards. Frick and Frack come to the Park tomorrow in "Silver Skates," the Monogram ice extravaganza featuring Kenny Baker, Patricia Morrison and the English skating star, Belita. Freddie Bartholomew makes a comeback in "Junior Army," co-attraction.

Hard Way.

A drama of a woman's driving, ruthless ambition coupled with an intense love for her sister and its effect upon the lives of others, makes its bow at the Ritz tomorrow. "The Hard Way," starring Ida Lupino and Dennis Morgan, tells the story of a relentless and frustrated woman who is so determined for a better life for herself and her sister that she breaks all the rules of human decency to attain it. The Ritz brothers are featured in the other picture, "Hi'ya Chum."

FAKE PASTOR FACES SENTENCE

Convicted of Using Ruse to Evade Draft.

CHICAGO —(INS)— The possibility of spending 10 years in prison for seeking to evade army service through posing falsely as a minister drew closer today to William B. Wernecke, a former leader of the German-American bund and friend of Herbert Hans Haupt, executed Nazi saboteur.

Wernecke was convicted by a federal court jury yesterday on two counts of an indictment charging draft evasion. He faces a maximum sentence of five years in prison on each count.

Judge John P. Barnes, set June 11 for hearing a defense motion for a new trial, but added, "I can't think of anything that would cause me to set aside the verdict of the jury."

SET JUNE 20 AS DEADLINE FOR WALKOUT

Policy Group Acts as Lewis Tells Strikers to Go To Pits Monday.

sumed until the miners returned to work.

The union policy committee declared that the miners recognized their responsibilities in the war effort.

"It is not the United Mine Workers of America's purpose in pressing for proper and equitable compensation for services rendered to hamper the war effort," the committee said, "but a simple desire of American coal miners to obtain and maintain an economic footing consistent with other Americans."

In issuing instructions to miners late yesterday to return to work on Monday, the UMW was bowing to orders from President Roosevelt. The policy committee, however, acted only after Solid Fuels Administrator Harold L. Ickes had asked UMW President John L. Lewis for assurance that the strike would end. The committee did not allude to the president's order.

Similarly, the committee took no cognizance of Mr. Roosevelt's back to work order in today's announcement. Nor did it allude to the war labor board's past orders that the old contract be extended indefinitely pending completion of collective bargaining.

Denying reports that coal stocks were dangerously low, the committee blamed operators for alleged refusal to negotiate a contract, and asserted that government seizure of the mines on May 1 "has seriously confused the situation."

The miners repeatedly have indicated they would rather deal with Ickes than the war labor board. The policy committee's statement underscored this preference.

"We recognize the many difficulties of the solid fuels administrator and the restricted limitation of his authority," the committee said.

An early agreement between the UMW and coal operators would dispel the danger of another coal strike, and some observers believed such an agreement was in prospect.

A reliable source said the union and the operators were approaching agreement Wednesday when the war labor board ordered negotiations suspended because the men had quit working when their second truce expired last Monday midnight.

The labor board will make the next move. It meets today to consider the status of the coal case. The board may decide when negotiations should be resumed and whether the board's original June 9 deadline for concluding negotiations still holds.

In recommending that the union policy committee order the work stoppage ended, Lewis said negotiations had been proceeding favorably when the WLB issued its order. A solution was imminent that would have reopened the mines not later than yesterday, he said.

There is reason to believe that the operators are anxious to reach a settlement as quickly as possible. For one thing, any additional costs the new contract will entail will be retroactive to the date of the expiration of the old contracts—April 1 in the case of the bituminous coal operators and May 1 for the anthracite operators.

When the new contract does go into effect the operators are expected to ask the Office of Price Administration to permit the increases to take care of their additional costs. But there will be no retroactive price increases.

Furthermore, the government is running the coal mines now and is likely to continue to do so until an agreement is reached—another reason the contractors would like to get a new contract in force.

One source said that some operators who have shown the least inclination to yield to union demands were nearly ready to fall in line.

Resentful Congress Puts Teeth In Bill

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) Mounting congressional resentment toward John L. Lewis today sped toward enactment the most far-reaching anti-strike legislation in 10 years of the New Deal.

Although the coal dispute which gave impetus to the measure may be settled before the bill becomes law, its sponsors predicted enactment anyhow.

The bill, approved by the house yesterday by a vote of 231 to 111, would:

1. Cloak the war labor board with statutory powers, including authority to subpoena witnesses in any labor dispute.

2. Provide $1,000 fine and or one year's imprisonment for persons who "aid" in interruption of work at war plants seized by the government.

3. Require 30 days' notice and a secret ballot before strikes can be called in war plants.

4. Require labor unions to register with the national labor relations board and file financial data.

5. Prohibit labor organizations from contributing to political campaigns.

The last three provisions were added by the house to the measure passed by the senate May 5. The senate measure empowered President Roosevelt to seize war plants in the event of a labor dispute.

Sen. Tom Connally, D., Tex., sponsor of the original measure, rejected the house amendments, and asked for the appointment of conferees to negotiate a compromise.

Sen. Frederick Van Nuys, D., Ind., chairman of the senate judiciary committee which originally considered the bill, said he believed that the conferees would reach an early agreement, regardless of whether a coal agreement is reached.

Miners Happy At Back-To-Work Order

PITTSBURGH — (INS) — "We'll be there when the whistles blow in the mines on Monday." This expression, heard on all sides today, epitomized the happy frame of mind of the striking coal miners as they prepared to do the bidding of John L. Lewis, and return to work on Monday, ending a 540,000-man walkout that had been crippling war production.

The men, members of one of the strongest disciplined unions in the country, submitted without question to the judgment of Lewis and the UMW policy committee in calling off the strike. Lewis had given the word. That was all they needed.

They were, however, obviously relieved that Lewis had bowed to the authority and prestige of the United States government. Many of them have sons and brothers in the armed services and they have flinched under insinuations that their strike was unpatriotic.

Steelmen Hail Order To Reopen Coal Pits

PITTSBURGH — (AP) — Steel makers today hailed the order to end a week's shutdown of the nation's coal mines on Monday as a move which would halt scheduled reduction in steel output of as much as 25 per cent in some mills.

A spokesman for the giant United States Steel Corporation said the shutdown had placed it "just at the point where we were feeling the pinch" and announced the return to the pits would cancel plans to curtail steel production.

A survey disclosed the strike would result in a production loss of between ten and twelve million tons of coal. One blast furnace of the Republic Steel Corporation had closed in Birmingham. Another was ready to shut down there and two were to be banked here.

to the six other power nations. He warned that Japan is a dangerous enemy, much more dangerous than the American people think.

"Japan used to get scrap iron from the United States. Now she gets iron ore from Manchuria. She controls 47 per cent of the world's rubber supply and in my belief Japan is a much greater power than Hitler's Europe.

"Italy is now a second rate power. Mussolini has few raw materials. He profited very little in his war against Ethiopia, and his great African empire has fallen.

"We must consider there is work to be done. The road ahead is not easy, but I am confident it leads to a better world."

Following Bolt's talk, Principal Glenn G. Rohleder presented the class for graduation.

Members of the class then received their diplomas. They were presented by John H. Eisaman, clerk of the Mansfield board of education.

The graduates marched into the stadium with the high school band playing Mendelssohn's "March from Athalia."

Rev. C. L. Kern, pastor of South Main street Evangelical church gave the invocation. Class President Robert Huber gave the salutation and Miriam Sauder read the class history, giving a brief summary of the highlights of the senior's 12 school years.

Louise Turner sang the class song, accompanied by Daniel McMichael. Rev. C. A. Portz, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran church gave the benediction.

Superintendent W. L. Miller introduced the speaker.

The program closed with the recessional march.

committees in each county which will designate the areas in which help is most urgent. Farmers will be required to pay a nominal charge for the tractors, furnish fuel and provide meals for the operators, it was said.

The highway director said 175 tractors will be made available, an average of about two per county. Some hard-hit counties, however, are expected to get more than two since farming is a minor item in several southern and eastern counties and the tractors will not be needed there.

Highway Director Sours said the larger model tractors can pull two 12-inch plows or larger sized harrows. The smaller tractors can handle one 14-inch plow or a smaller harrow.

The county agent said he is awaiting more information from the state covering the use of tractors and the number available and will inform farmers of the details of the program immediately.

The farm assistance will delay the highway department's weed cutting program normally under way at this time, but Sours said:

"It is a matter of more food or more weeds. I believe the public will tolerate the weeds until the farm crisis passes."

Some farms will require use of the state tractors three days, said Guy Dowdy of the Ohio State university agriculture extension division. He predicted that much work would be done at night. Two operators, working in shifts, probably will plow around the clock in an effort to roll back the planting season.

Director H. C. Ramsower, of the extension division, hailed the highway department program as a "genuine service to the farmer, the state and the nation."

"Every day's delay in corn planting will cut production materially," he said. "The additional power made available by the state for plowing is distinctly of outstanding assistance in what is a national emergency, especially in the corn belt."

PICK WARRENITE AS PRESIDENT

Commercial Secretaries Hold Election at Concluding Convention Session.

board voted to hold the mid-winter convention in Columbus.

Election results were announced at the closing luncheon which preceded the visit to Malabar Farm this afternoon.

Problems of the war and the effectiveness of the Chamber of Commerce in the present war effort were considered in the morning business session. Problems of the retailer were presented by Charles E. Boyd, secretary of the Retail Merchants association of Detroit and past president of the National Retail Dry Goods association. Problems of industry were presented by Stanley Grove, executive manager of the Toledo Chamber of Commerce. In open discussion the secretaries considered community problems with Don W. Dawson, secretary of the Warren Chamber of Commerce, in charge.

At last night's banquet, held in the Mansfield-Leland ballroom, secretaries and their wives heard Louis B. Seltzer, editor-in-chief of Ohio Scripps-Howard papers call for a widening of Chamber of Commerce interests, with emphasis on the post-war period.

"Chambers of Commerce should not represent the interests of business exclusively," Seltzer said; "they should recognize the problems of employes as well as those of employers. They should be a clearing house and a guiding light, should gather all community activities together and consolidate them for the best community good."

Seltzer declared that in the world to come, after the war, the United States would be the economic fulcrum of the world, and that the course of the world will be shaped principally by what the United States does with its vast resources and wealth.

"The influence of the United States in that period will last for generations," he said, "and what the United States does in that period will be a reflection of the thinking of us here now. Therefore, we must think deeply about ourselves and the world.

"The Chamber of Commerce has done a vital job in the past. It must now prepare itself to be a non-partisan leader for the good of all communities."

Seltzer was introduced by Morris Edwards, executive vice president, of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, who was toastmaster for the program.

Another speaker at the dinner meeting was Delmar G. Starkey, executive secretary of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce.

Following the opening luncheon yesterday noon the secretaries met to discuss the problems of peace. Each community has different problems in the peace which is to come, the delegates decided.

A discussion of the national post-war problems by Clarence R. Miles, manager of the north central division of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce brought forth the general decision that the most important problem of the national chamber in the post-war world is the absorbing of the returning soldiers in industry.

Clarence Jackson, executive vice president of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce, spoke on the state post-war problems and a general discussion led by Harry Bennet, executive secretary of the Akron Chamber of Commerce, considered the community post-war problems.

Wives of the commercial secretaries were served a buffet luncheon in the "kitchen of tomorrow" at Westinghouse. Mrs. Julia Kiene, Westinghouse home economist, spoke to the guests on "Wartime Meals" and gave each woman a complimentary cookbook containing menus for wartime meals. Following the luncheon the group was taken through the binocular section of the plant and later on a sightseeing tour of the city.
